CANNABIS BENEFITS

Cannabis Accounting and IRS code section 280 E

It's not about how much money you make, but how much money you keep after paying your taxes!

The Coalition has a team of experienced accountants that can navigate Section 280E of the IRS code. This code forbids businesses from deducting otherwise ordinary business expenses from gross income that is associated with the trafficking of scheduled I or II substances. Since cannabis is classified in this category by the Controlled Substance Act, you need an experienced accountant to navigate the laws and minimize your tax bill.

Our accounting partners provide expert tax filing services to Coalition members and other financial services including:

- + Section 280E IRS code expertise
- + Strategic finance, planning, and analysis
- + Financial statement preparation (unaudited)
- + Cash flow analysis and forecasting

Cannabis Insurance

A cannabis business needs a minimum Commercial General Liability (CGL) insurance policy of $2 million, with insurance of up to $1 million for each loss. CGL policies typically cover you and your business for claims that happen as a result of normal operations.

Most states also require a surety bond that should be addressed to the state.

If you have employees, your business is required to have Workers Compensation (WC) insurance. WC coverage can provide wage replacement and medical benefits to your employees injured on the job. In certain California cities, WC should cover $1 million per accident.

Lastly, even though it is not required, we highly recommend securing Product Liability (PL) insurance if you sell, make, or distribute products. If your product allegedly hurts someone or damages their property, this coverage will help pay your legal fees, judgment, or settlement.

Again, these are general requirements. We encourage you to learn more about specific requirements from the Insurance commissioner for your state.
